other person out. You just want to win. There are others known as punchers. They might take a lot of punishment in order to land that one blockbuster that will knock the opponent into the middle of next week. If the puncher is against a good boxer, the puncher will generally lose because the boxer is not going to allow the puncher to land that big punch. You then have boxer-punchers--the individuals who box skillfully but also pack a devastating wallop. This is the person who can handle the puncher and the boxer. The boxer is going to skitter around and dance like a water bug on the surface of the water. Well, the boxer-puncher can nullify that because he possesses the ability to box and he knows how to cut the ring off and stop the boxer from eluding. Then, when he gets the boxer in a vulnerable position, he puts the quietus on him. Well, in the Legislature, sometimes it's necessary to use the tactics of the boxer, with the ultimate intent of scoring the knockout. So I have to, over a number of rounds, tire my opponents, weary them, take the fight out of them, make them feel there is no way they can whip me, and they can't. Because, for me, each bill is one round in a fifteen round fight that spans the entire session. So one bill may slip by and the one whose bill that was will breathe a sigh of relief, but that bill helped me during that round to put a hurting on another bill in a succeeding round, so I have to pound away at Senator Dierks and Senator Wehrbein, until I can bring them to a position of reasonableness, reasonableness which will lead them to adopt my amendment. They cannot adopt this motion, which I understand very well. This motion would kill the A bill. There is not any likelihood of killing the A bill, but this is a part of the softening up process. Mr. President, I have watched people cook meat and they take a hammer that has a lot of little projections on it and they beat the stew out of that meat. They just beat it and beat it and beat it, and it's supposed to break down something in the meat to tenderize it. Well, to use an analogy, without knowing what that hammer is called, that's the part of the process of cooking this steak that I'm engaged in right now, and dealing with my indefinite postponement motion is a part of it because it gives me an opportunity to discuss the flaws in the underlying bill to show that we definitely ought not fund it. I will have to wait till another day...
